Three Omaha U Co-eds Act As Princesses At Ak-Sar-Ben

By Marilyn Miller

The mythical kingdom of Quivira will be enhanced tonight by the presence of three Omaha University co-eds acting in the capacity of princesses at the coronation of the LXX King and Queen of Ak-Sar-Ben.

The annual event sponsored by the Knights of Ak-Sar-Ben selects outstanding young women of the Omaha area who have contributed to some aspect of the community to serve for the year.

Transfer Students

Two of the princesses at OU are recent transfer students and the third has been active on campus for four years.

Traveling is of special interest to Miss Cynthia Elise Scoular who spent seven months abroad in the home of a German family.

The brown-eyed brunette is a transfer student working toward a degree in speech, radio, and television.

Prior to her transfer, she attended Monticello College at Alton, Ill., and the University of Nebraska. Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority was her affiliation at the latter.

Psych Majors

Work towards a psychology degree will be farthest from the mind of Miss Mary Swanson as she begins her long walk down the aisle of Ak-Sar-Ben.

She is attending Omaha University with the hopes of completing work on a Masters Degree.

Before transferring to OU, Miss Swanson attended Bradford Junior College and Washington University.

The blonde Miss Swanson has been active in Delta Gamma Sorority, Petite Pershing and Angel's Flight. In her spare time, she enjoys water sports, painting and fashion designing.

The "typical Indianne" of 1961 at OU will be out of uniform as she "marches" gracefully as a princess into the throne room tonight.

Brown-eyed and blonde Miss Sherrie Ulfers is now head of the Indianne for the second consecutive year.

She is also a member of Zeta Tau Alpha Sorority and has been a member of the WRA and bowling club. Her hobbies included swimming, water skiing, bowling and horseback riding.

Future plans include work on an advanced career in psychology.

Serendipities, Peterson Trio Scheduled For November 6

Director of Student Activities William Gerbracht announced this week the appearance of the Serendipity Singers and the Oscar Peterson Trio on campus the evening of November 6 in the Field House.

Gerbracht said the two groups will appear at OU in conjunction with the Ford Motor Company's Caravan of Music which is presently touring the United States. The show will be sponsored on campus by the Student Activities Committee.

The Serendipity Singers gained national fame with their recordings of "Crooked Little Man" and "Beans in Your Ears". The group, which composes more than 90 percent of all its material, has also recorded three albums on the Philips label and appeared on six nationally televised hoote-nanny shows.

Appearing on the same bill, the Oscar Peterson Trio is unique in that it does not feature a pianist and two subdued assistants. The trio rose to fame in New York and Chicago nightclubs over the past few years, but have had relatively little exposure in the Midwest.

Gerbracht indicated the November 6 show will be somewhat of a "test show" to see how students respond to this type of entertainment. He said if the response is good (he hopes four thousand will attend) more will be planned in the future.

Last year Peter, Paul and Mary were scheduled for an OU appearance but at the last minute the show was cancelled due to problems in the contract. Gerbracht said this year there is no possible way the November 6 show can be cancelled since the contract for appearance has been signed.

Admission requires a current activity card per person. No tickets will be sold and the show is restricted to Omaha University students only.

Traywick Selected After 6 Month Search By Regents Committee

Editor's Note:

On Feb. 1, 1965, Dr. Leland Traywick will become the eighth president of Omaha University. The president-elect once made a statement to the effect that he would not sacrifice his ideals and beliefs in an attempt to avoid controversy.

He encountered that controversy in Springfield, Mo., where he served as president of Southwest Missouri State College since 1961. And it popped up again here shortly after he was named president of Omaha University.

In both cases, the facts point out that criticism of Dr. Traywick represented an injustice to the man.

The story has been told before, but the staff of the Gateway feels that it should be told again—to the students of Omaha University—whose lives this man may greatly influence.

Gateway reporter Paul Henderson spent three weeks gathering material for the Dr. Leland Traywick story. The facts, with his interpretations, will be presented in a two-part series commencing with this edition.

By Paul Henderson

Part One

What kind of a man does it take to head a multi-million dollar institution, specifically a university?

In February of last year when Omaha University President Milo Bail announced that he wished to retire on or before September 1, 1965, all persons concerned knew that the job of finding a successor would not be an easy one.

The final decision would be preceded by months of inquiry and study—and it was.

The job was placed in the hands of two committees that same month. The regents committee was headed by Dr. Herbert Davis and included Board President Varro Rhodes and members Samuel Greenberg and C. F. Moulton.

Faculty Committee

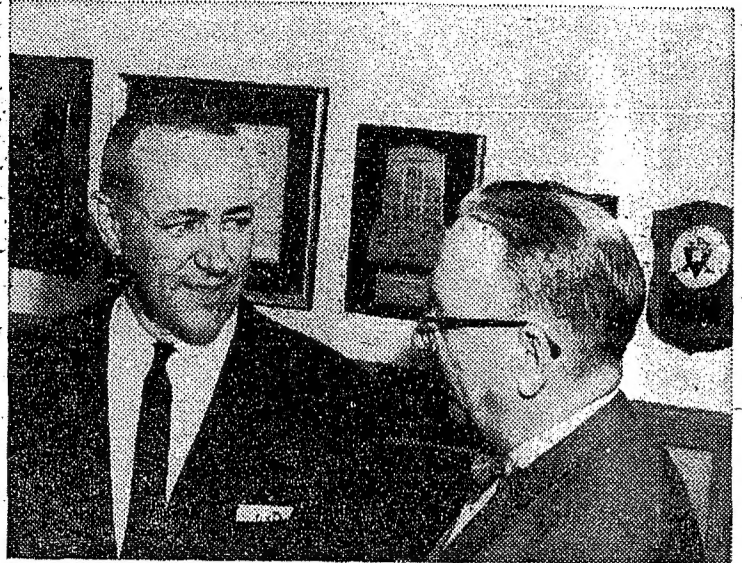

Comprising the faculty committee were Dr. George Harris, chairman; Dr. Paul Kennedy, Philip Vogt and Anston Marston.

By Mid-March, the committees had suggested the names of 41 presidential possibilities. Fourteen of them were considered top choices.

Among the fourteen was the name of Dr. Leland Traywick, submitted by Dr. Elroy J. Steele of the university economics department.

An investigation of the fourteen favorites followed during the months of April and May. "We received nothing but excellent, wonderful reports on Dr. Traywick," Rhodes later commented.

The Missouri Educator had a distinguished background. Born in Okmulgee, Okla., Dr. Traywick earned bachelor's and master's degrees in history at the

Dr. Traywick and Bail . . . in July, 1964

University of Missouri, and a Ph.D. in Economics at the University of Illinois in 1942.

With schooling under his belt, he went to work for the government as a War Production Board economist in Washington, D.C. He entered as a private and was discharged in 1946 as a first lieutenant.

Returns To Education

Dr. Traywick returned to education that same year, serving first at Western Reserve University in Cleveland, Ohio, then as assistant dean of the College of Business and Public Service at Michigan State University from 1947 to 1960.

Before taking the Southwest Missouri State College presidency in 1961, Dr. Traywick worked in New York for a year as associate director of the Committee for Economic Development.

The reports also indicated a fine personal background. The OU committees heard about a man active in church (Episcopal), community and Masonic (32nd degree) affairs.

Dr. Traywick was described as a nice looking man, 6-foot 3 inches tall and 200 pounds. The committees learned that Dr. Traywick and his wife, Harriet, were married in 1942, and have two children—Eric, 16, and Harriet, 14.

In mid-May, letters were sent to the fourteen favorites inquiring if they would be interested in the job. Dr. Traywick was one of the seven who replied affirmatively.

Top Candidate

At this point, Dr. Traywick was considered as the top candidate, but the real investigating was just beginning. On June 2, Dr. Davis and Dr. Harris, representing each of the two committees, flew to Springfield Mo.

Dr. Davis later stated that neither of them had knowledge at that time of any controversy concerning Dr. Traywick and his job at the Missouri school. They first learned about it during a taxi ride from the Springfield airport to their hotel.

The taxi driver must have heard his two passengers chatting about Dr. Traywick when he interrupted their conversation with the unexpected statement: "The whole town's upset. Everybody is on Dr. Traywick's side."

"We didn't know what he was talking about," Dr. Davis recalled.

Missouri Problems

They learned that on the day preceding the taxi ride, the Southwest Missouri State College regents had demanded Dr. Traywick's resignation.

On that same visit, the Omaha representatives no doubt began to conclude that while Dr. Traywick's troubles with the SMS regents were indeed real, they were a moot point.

Doctors Davis and Harris visited Dr. Edward McCurtain, former head of the sociology department at Omaha U., who now had that same position at Drury College in Springfield. He detailed the buildup to Dr. Traywick's resignation.

"You couldn't do better than hiring him," he emphasized.

Record Number Of Tigers Prowl OU Campus This Year

This week marked the eighth consecutive year that the Arnold Air Society's "Tigers" have appeared on campus for a week of harrasing, callisthenics and pledge duties.

"Tiger Week", as this period is referred to among the AFROTC Cadets, is the preparation of the junior cadets for informal initiation into Arnold Air Society tomorrow.

The weeks activities, which are planned by the senior cadet officers, include: "Tigers" reporting for duty at 6:30 A.M. each morning, greeting all active members of A. A. S. and guarding "Snoopy", a character from Peanuts comic strip, for the senior cadets.

Last year you might have seen the "Tigers" doing push-ups in the halls between classes or diving into the grass when a senior officer commanded "Air Raid".

This year the Administration confined this type of activity to the ROTC cadet staff room.

This year also holds the record for the number of "Tigers" on campus. If you see a man wearing a green uniform, a blue baseball cap, white tennis shoes, sun glasses and guarding a toy dog called Snoopy, then he is one of this years 34 Tigers.

Arnold Air Society, a national organization, is designed to further the mission, purposes, traditions and concepts of the U. S. Air Force, to promote American citizenship and to create a closer and more efficient relationship among ROTC cadets.

Activities of "Tiger Week" are capped off on Sunday evening with a formal swearing in ceremony, dinner and dance at the Offutt Air Force Base Officers club.

Traywick Selected to Head OU After Six Month Study

The Omahans spent most of the day in Springfield and returned home with a highly enthusiastic report.

The following week, the SMS regents issued a 24-page report explaining their dissatisfaction with Dr. Traywick. It boiled down basically to administrative matters in which Traywick had disagreed with the regents—and to the question of exactly who was running the college.

Dr. Traywick immediately sent a copy of the report to Omaha where it was "read thoroughly," Rhodes emphasized.

Dr. and Mrs. Traywick came to Omaha on June 11. On the following day he met with President Milo Bail, toured the campus, and met with the faculty.

During that visit he faced the seven university deans who left no stones unturned with their questions. And when their critical test was over, the deans advised, "Don't look any further."

Puzzling?

But the hiring committees still found the Springfield situation puzzling. Rhodes and O. U. regent Robert M. Spire traveled to Nevada, Missouri for a talk with Kenneth Postlethwaite, president of the SMS regents.

After talking with the Missourians they returned with the solid conclusion that personal politics was the underlying factor in the dispute.

Adding to this conclusion was the emotional response from the citizens of Southwest Missouri. In short, Missourians called the forced resignation of Dr. Traywick "tragic," and they responded in a number of ways. For example:

Newspaper Editorial

The Springfield Leader-Press launched an editorial bombardment on the SMS regents, charging them with "appalling ineptness." The editorials called for an investigation of the matter by the Governor of Missouri. Twenty-nine of the 98 faculty members at Southwest Missouri indicated in a poll that they were considering resigning because of the dismissal of Dr. Traywick.

Students at the school were practically unanimous in condemning the dismissal of Dr. Traywick and circulated petitions protesting the action by the regents.

The final report came from O.U. faculty members Dr. Paul C. Kennedy and Dr. Ralph Wardle. They talked informally with Southwest Missouri faculty members and received reports "absolutely favorable in every way."

He's Our Man

That clinched it. The committees settled on Dr. Traywick on July 20, the regents gave their endorsement on July 23, and a public announcement was made on July 28.

The difficult search was concluded. Omaha University, a progressive institution, had found a man who has proven himself willing to fight for progressiveness.

And that was exactly the kind of man that they wanted.

The final chapter in the hiring of Dr. Leland Traywick was far from being written. Controversy popped up again when U. S. Representative Glen Cunningham criticized the choice of the incoming O.U. president. The Gateway will present that story in detail in next week's edition.

Regents Approve $200,000 Action

The Omaha University Board of Regents held its second meeting of the fall school term yesterday.

The main course of business on the docket was an investment of $200,000 in government bonds on short term obligations. The board approved the action after a recommendation from the Finance Committee.

The Faculty and Student Relations Committee of the board submitted the names of four student interns for approval. The four recognized by the board are:

Galord N. Brinlee—psychology
Larry A. Hardt—biology
Elizabeth Kisicki—engineering

John A. Niemann—psychology
The board heard a report from President Milo Bail on first semester enrollment. Bail also submitted a report on the American Council which he attended in San Francisco earlier this fall.

A request to spend $90 for hat and coats racks at strategic points on campus was also approved by the board.

Enrollment Shows Increase Of 561

Omaha University Registrar Virgil Sharpe announced total enrollment for both day and evening classes is the highest ever.

Sharpe quoted the complete registration figure at 8,699 students as compared with 8,138 last fall. This is an all-time enrollment peak, according to Sharpe.

Breaking down the figure it shows there are 4,173 full-time undergraduate students (3,632 last year) and 33 full time graduate students.

There are 4,586 part-time undergraduate students and 754 part-time, graduate students.

Tech Institute Owes Success To E. E. Kinney

By John Weber

Fifty daytime and 30 night students are enrolled in the technical institute program at Omaha University, according to adviser Edwin E. Kinney. Kinney compares OU's 80 students with the 45 people enrolled in Iowa State's program, which first began in 1960. Now Iowa State has between 450 to 500 students in the program, he said.

How did OU's technical institute program get off to such a good start? It was due mainly to program head Kinney.

He worked hard the past summer to make the technical institute a reality at OU. First he mailed brochures to Omaha high school graduates and businessmen in the area. The brochures invited further inquiries into the program. About 150 talked to Mr. Kinney about the program. Of these people, 80 enrolled in the program.

Mr. Kinney also arranged spot announcements on local radio and television stations. When enough people showed interest in the program, he lined up the faculty.

Eight instructors in the engineering department are helping teach the two-year credit program. In addition, 10 men, some from the engineering department and some from local industry, are teaching the non-credit classes.

Mr. Kinney hopes OU's technical institute grows as rapidly and as successfully as the program at Iowa State.

Monday Kickoff For Blood Drive

"You're My Type" is the theme of the 1964 Blood Drive.

Sponsored by the three religious organizations on campus Bykota, Canterbury Club and Newman Club, the drive will take place Monday between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m. on the third floor of the Student Center. Although there is no over-all chairman, each group has submitted two members to work on the drive. They are: Leroy Dyer and Nancy Lunsford, Bykota; Bob Bee and John Kreek, Canterbury and Alice Hewitt and Bette Zoorwill, Newman.

According to Dean Donald Pflasterer, anyone giving blood should allow one hour for the contribution. Although it takes only seven or eight minutes to actually donate the blood, it takes considerably longer to be questioned and fill out cards beforehand. Anyone arriving at a class 5 or 10 minutes late because of giving blood will not be counted tardy.

Two trophies will be presented to the winners of two different divisions. One is on a percentage basis, thus enabling the smaller groups just as much chance to win as the larger groups. The other trophy is to be awarded on the basis of the most number of pints any one group contributes. An unaffiliated student can donate blood for any chartered campus organization.

From The Bushes

By Mike Moran

Doubters Beware!

For those inclined to doubt that fraternity life at OU offers anything besides an opportunity to wear a suit and tie, take notice.

The shocking display of spirit and enthusiasm at last week's Sig Ep versus Pi Kap football game left this writer a little stunned, to say the least.

After being used to the semi-funeral attitude of fans at OU home games, it was a little disturbing to see some eight or nine hundred people lining the bank to the north of the women's jousting field, yelling at the top of their lungs at everything and anything.

The teams themselves warmed up to a constant din from the crowd while whooping and hollering private incantations to each other as the adrenalin supply increased ten fold in the pit of my stomach.

The game itself was a slam-bang affair with pro-type offenses and defenses and various trick plays, including one where the center kept the ball between his legs after the snap and a halfback came on a delay and took it the opposite way.

The roar of the crowd never ceased and cries of "string 'em up" and "lynch the dog" sailed towards excited officials who happened to call one on their heroes.

When the dust settled, Pi Kaps had won and formed a victory circle to sing some mysterious chant while dejected Sig Eps headed for home vowing a different outcome next time.

As I trudged wearily to my car, mentally exhausted and drained of all emotion, it became obvious that I had seen one of the true examples of the word "fraternity".

A highly interesting afternoon, and one I won't forget. . . .

Big Woody Returns

Back for another bout with the basketball at OU this year is 6-8 Ed Woodward. Ed has two letters to his credit despite being ineligible last year and once before. The big Ralston grad was the most improved man on the squad two years ago before losing a battle to the books. If Woodward can continue the rapid improvement, both on the court and in the classroom, he can be a big factor in the 1964-65 Indian hopes. Woody's got the desire and the tools to become a solid performer.

Taken By Surprise

As a group of women stepped off an elevator in Peoria's Pere Marquette Hotel, one of them asked a friend of mine who the large young man with the duffle bag standing next to her was.

When the woman was told that the young giant was an Omaha University football tackle, she stepped backwards in amazement.

She went on to say that the boy had taken time to carry her crippled son and his wheelchair up two flights of stairs when he became ill and the elevator was late.

"But I thought football players were animals," she said. Just goes to show you. . . .

Fine young group of men Al Caniglia has rounded up this autumn. They're already champions in one league. . . .

What Do You Do?

Bradley coach Billy Stone was amazed at OU's one-two punch of Gerald Allen and Marlin Briscoe. Stone shook his head time after time as the elusive backs twisted out of several tacklers' grasps for long yardage.

Allen's performance Saturday at Peoria may rank as the greatest one man show ever put on by an Indian back, including the feats of All-American Billy Englehardt.

Fairness?

Officials at the Bradley game set an all time record for stretching out the final few seconds. When Bradley muffed a short kickoff and had to do it again, the second boot took only one second on the clock. I'll bet that clock operator slices his sandwich meat with a micrometer, too.

Scouting Reports . . .

OU opponents just about split in the won-lost column last week. Idaho State dumped Fresno State, 20-12. Northern Illinois beat Illinois State, 20-14. Washburn dumped Southern Colorado, 19-12, and Morningside trounced South Dakota, 41-12. Losers included Drake, 41-14 to State College of Iowa, and Pittsburg, 13-0 to Southwest Missouri. Fort Hays bounced Central Missouri for its third win against one loss.

Gorillas Offer First CIC Hurdle For Hot Indians

OU's All-American Candidate Gerry Allen Goes Against Bradley

Omaha's touring Indians, a team that has seen more of the country the last three weeks than the Goodyear Blimp, hits the road again today for a Saturday engagement with Pittsburg State at Pittsburg, Kansas.

The Gorilla fray will be the first hurdle in the Indian path to a third consecutive CIC title. OU has met the Kansas team three years in a row for the conference crown but a scheduling quirk forced an earlier meeting this year. Last year the Indians clobbered Pittsburg, 37-20 for CIC laurels.

Pitt is 2-2 after a 13-0 whitewashing at the hands of the Southwest Missouri Bears at home last Saturday. Coach Al Caniglia of OU points out that they have almost the same team as last year and will field a typical, hard hitting ball club that chews up yardage on the ground.

Wanted . . Gerry Allen

A marked man undoubtedly will be OU's terrific junior halfback, Gerry Allen. Allen ran 213 yards and three TD's in the 29-28 OU win at Bradley last week to take over the conference rushing lead.

Sophomore signal caller Marlin Briscoe ran for 117 yards and added 19 more through the air to complete a double trouble tandem for the Indians.

The Pittsburg game will mark the end of a three game road trip for the Indians. The team comes home to meet Drake at the Stadium next Saturday afternoon as the big attraction of the 1964 Omaha University Homecoming festivities. OU will meet Washburn at home the next week before traveling again to Emporia State.

Cardie's Runners Face Yankton College Here

Fresh from a whipping of South Dakota U., Coach Lloyd Cardwell's cross country squad will take on Yankton College today at 4. Elmwood Park will be the course for the meet as it has been for the other two home attractions.

OU's Ken Gould, a junior from Lyons, Nebraska, will be out to crack his own school three-mile mark of 15:37 that he set against the Coyotes on Tuesday.
